POST Method

- o The POST method is used to collect values from a form.
- o The POST method has no limits on the amount of information to send because URL lengths are unlimited.
- o The POST method is the not default method for many browsers.
- o In the POST method, the page and the encoded information are not separated by the question mark (?) sign.
- o In the POST method, the browser doesn't append the data onto the URL.
- o The POST method is secure because information sent from a form with the GET method is invisible to everyone.
- o The POST method can be used to send binary data, like images or Word documents, to the server.
- o In the POST method, the data is sent as standard input.
- o The POST method is slower than the GET method.
- o PHP provides the $_POST associative array to access all the information sent using the GET method.
